COMMON CAUSES OF ITCHING IN DOGS

- Environmental - Something as simple as the grass on your lawn can make your dog itch. Regular bathing will help and also prevent your dog from harboring mites and ticks. Make sure that after bathing your dog’s skin is completely dry as moisture can exacerbate the problem.
- Nutritional - A very common cause of skin problems. Don’t skimp on the quality of food. Meat based food is usually superior to grain based food in this respect. You might also want to add a little Healthy Skin Shiny Coat to your dog’s diet, this will help in the elimination of toxins.
- Parasitic - Fleas are usually the obvious culprit when the dog is scratching. Frontline and Advantix are readily available but they should be used with care. A more gentle solution that will repel all manner of insects is Flea the Scene, it’s all natural and completely safe.
- Infection - Bacteria, fungi and yeast based organisms all love your dog, especially the darker moister areas like ears and around the eyes. Again make sure that your dog is groomed regularly and dried thoroughly. If you want to go that extra mile happytails’ Eyepads will help to clean the eyes and muzzle and also combat bacteria naturally. The companion product Eyemunity is an all-natural food supplement that boosts a dog’s immune system.
- Allergies - Difficult to diagnose and treat because there are so many allergens in the environment. This is an area where a trip to your vet is a must.
- Neurogenic - This simply means that the problem is indigenous to the dog himself. The most common form of neurogenic problem is called Acral Lick Granuloma, and is characterized by obsessive licking and chewing. It can be caused by such things as boredom, separation anxiety, frustration or confinement. Again, this is a condition which requires a visit to your vet.

“Hey, I’m a dog, for me scratch n’ sniff is a lifestyle, and now with Itchin’ for Relief I do a whole lot less scratching and a whole lot more sniffing.”
